

PUBLIC ART

The history of public art is as old as civilization. Since the birth of society humans have sought to beautify their surroundings it is a profound calling that has led to some of the greatest creations on earth.

Artists of all ages all over the world create projects that can be displayed for the public. Many of the works you see took more than one person to make, these are collaborative works of art.

Making and designing art for the public takes skill, dedication, practice, and an understanding of socially appropriate creations.
